

She Was Wearing

THE ANACACHO ROOM—For a luncheon style show, Mrs. Burton Gold of Foughkeessie, N.Y., was wearing a lightweight wool ensemble combining a bright orange-red tone with white. The sleeveless, sheath dress of orange-red was styled with high jewel neckline and was topped with a blouson jacket of matching orange-red and white tweed. She wore a beret of stitched white satin, and further accessorized the ensemble with white gloves, pearl choker and earrings and black patent pumps and handbag. Mrs. Gold and her two children, Michael, 3, and Tami, 16 months, are visiting her mother, Mrs. Leo Mendlovitz of New Braunfels. Mrs. Gold was the luncheon guest of her aunt, Mrs. George Mendlovitz of Seguin.

Also in the Anacacho Room, Mrs. Phil Greeley wore a chemise of black and white imported cotton tweed. The dress was styled with scooped neckline and just-below-elbow dolman sleeves. It was belted in front with self-fabric and hung loose in back. She wore an off-face toque of white straw cloth and white shorty gloves. Her shoes and handbag were black patent, a large metallic safety pin fashioning the handle of the purse. She wore pearl earrings.

IN THE GUNTER—For the luncheon style show of the Downtown Opti-Club, Mrs. Roy Willis was wearing an ensemble in muted shades of blue and lavender. The two colors were combined in a silk print dress fashioned with straight skirt, three-quarter sleeves, and draped, modified shirtwaist collar centered with a lavender grosgrain flat bow. She repeated the lavender in gloves and a small hat of straw cloth. Her shoes and handbag were navy calfskin.

Also attending the show were Mrs. E. C. Reichardt and Mrs. G. A. Cole. Mrs. Reichardt wore a black and white slim lined cotton tweed shirtwaist dress with white linen collar. She accented the ensemble with a shiny red straw cloche, a corsage of red poppies and red calf shoes and handbag. Mrs. Cole was wearing a black crepe sheath and small black velvet hat. Her tapered pumps were of black suede detailed with grey velvet bows. Other accessories included a black handbag, white gloves and pearl earrings. She wore a topcoat of Dior blue.
